EatAlley Singapore is opening in Orchard Gateway come June 2023

If you're a fan of Malaysian food, chances are that EatAlley Singapore, an upcoming food enclave in Orchard Gateway, will be right up your alley. Opening in June 2023, the space is set to feature six well-known eateries from Kuala Lumpur that offer the best of the city's hawker fare, including wonton noodles, Klang-style bak kut teh, and braised duck.

Those who frequently make trips to KL may be familiar with Restoran Koon Kee Wan Tan Mee, a popular wonton mee stall in the city and one of the most anticipated fixtures at EatAlley. As you’d expect from good Malaysian-style wonton mee, their noodles are coated with dark sauce, and their char siu is said to be juicy, sweet, and well-charred.

Another stall to look forward to is Siong Huat Bak Kut Teh Restaurant. This acclaimed eatery serves Klang-style bak kut teh—that means the herbal version of the dish, instead of the more peppery one most Singaporeans are used to. Fans of the stall often praise the aromatic and flavourful broth, as well as the succulent ribs. We’re hoping that the Kam Heong Braised Duck is another big name that'll be at EatAlley. They serve old-school braised duck that's said to be tender and juicy, with a braising sauce that's fragrant but not too salty. It's best had with salted vegetables and shiitake mushrooms!

Hong Lai Hokkien Mee, Soong Kee Beef Noodles, and RESTORAN CHUAN HUAT (泉发茶餐室@猪肉粉) are the other three stalls in the line-up. Mark your calendars if any of these pique your interest!
